Board and Committee Self-Evaluations

New York Stock Exchange requires boards to conduct annual self-evaluations. Even if not required, board and committee self-evaluations have become a best practice and an expectation of institutional investors. Self-evaluations can aid in:

- Improving board effectiveness
- Identifying problem areas and issues to be addressed
- Assessing board leadership
- Enhancing processes for board oversight

Board and Committee Self-Evaluations

Topics covered by self-evaluations include:

- Adequacy of oversight of management
- Effectiveness of board decision-making process
- Quality of board decisions
- Appropriateness of board composition
- Engagement of board members, group dynamics and leadership
